The two days seminar was inaugurated by Ms.Anita Das, IAS, till recently secretary AYUSH, govt of India. She lighted the lamp and also garlanded the portrait of Dr.Hanemann. She also garlanded the portrait of late Mr.P.N.Jain, the visionary founder of B.Jain. Mr.P.N.Jain founded B.Jain publishing house in the year 1968 and started its journal Homoeopathic Heritage in 1976. One doesn't know what he thought starting a business in homoeopathic book publishing, but he definitely wrote a success story unmatched in the history of homeopathy.

Mrs.Das gave a flourishing speech during inauguration session. Having worked in AYUSH she has ample idea about homeopathy and other systems. She said that objective of this event is learning from each other and giving knowledge for better patient care. For several chronic diseases allopathy has no answer but Ayurveda and Homeopathy has the answer. In rural areas health services need to be stepped up and homeopathic doctors have a role there. She said that homeopathic organization must showcase their best work and services so that the policy makers and public at large notice them.

Ms. Das was at pain to say that there is so much domination of one system of medicine [allopathy] that people tend to forget that other systems exist. She thought that homeopathy associations should be more active to get homeopathy its due. She was not happy with the work of states homeopathy boards and criticized their lethargic work in registration and up gradation of state register and holding the regular elections. She thought that Ayurvedic and Unani organizations are much more active and united.

Mrs.Das was not happy with education standards in AYUSH streams; she said it is in very very poor condition, institutions are poor in infrastructure, not having provision for regular teachers. She also felt that AYUSH doctors should practice only in their system and should not practice in allopathy.

She informed the gathering that 11th five-year plan has much more budget provision for AYUSH and homeopathic institution should utilize this opportunity. Public private partnership is one mode where in institutions can get funds from AYUSH for any project..

Mr.Das thought time for homeopathy has come, and all the homeopaths should say it aggressively and assertatively.
